

HMS Welcomes Jason Cooper as Chief Analytics Officer, Population Health Management

IRVING, Texas, July 24, 2019 (PRWEB) – HMS (NASDAQ: HMSY) has appointed Jason Cooper as chief analytics officer, population health management, effective August 2019. Cooper will oversee and lead research regarding HMS' population health management capabilities as well as further develop and integrate the Elli solution product in to the overall population health. Cooper has experience specializing in data, analytics and technology, spanning from for-profit, nonprofit and government domains, including senior leadership roles at Blue Cross Blue Shield plans, Cigna and CVS Health.

"I am looking forward to working with Jason and excited to welcome him to the HMS team," Emmet O'Gara, executive vice president, population health management, said. "He has a 20-plus year track record of being an industry thought leader and experienced researcher. I am confident he will be instrumental in successfully furthering the implementation of Elli in to HMS' population health management."

Cooper will report to O'Gara and serve as the head of the population health management analytics team. He brings more than 20 years' experience and has worked with advanced NASA, NIOSH and DOD systems engineering, with accolades such as well-published author and prior funded researcher.

Preceding his position at HMS, Cooper was the owner and managing director of his own consulting firm. He is a member of the International Institute for Analytics, the Healthcare Information and Management Systems Society, the Healthcare Financial Management Association and has served on the advisory boards of bosWell, Care to Caregiver, R2.ai and Sentrian.

"I am very pleased to be joining the HMS team and utilizing my skillset to further develop product solutions," Cooper said. "HMS has been a leader in healthcare technology and I am anticipating working for a company positioned to have such a large impact on the healthcare industry."
